HANGING IN THE BALANCE

THE removal of Stalin's embalmed body from the revered Lenin-Stalin mausoleum provides the most vivid illustration of the lengths to which the leaders of Russia are prepared to go to repudiate the widely-criticised "cult of personality." No single act could have marked so decisively this rejection of a man and his policies whose praises were once sung from Russian rooftops.

It also marks the culmination of the current attacks against the "anti-party group"—the men who were Stalin's political heirs and who ruled Russia between the time of Stalin's death and the accession of Mr. Kruschev. Their fate now hangs in the balance.

THE removal of Stalin's body has also a symbolic significance for Albania, whose dictator General Enver Hoxha, currently at loggerheads with Moscow, has fashioned himself in the image of the former Soviet leader. Inextricably involved also are the Chinese. Albania's ally in the dispute with Russia. The interesting question is why has Mr. Kruschev chosen this time for an ideological showdown?

It is not certain whether he has acted out of a feeling of self-confidence or insecurity. The process of disgrace and humiliation which the anti-party group has been undergoing in recent years may have reached the stage where only the coup de grace remained to be administered. Alternatively, Mr. Kruschev may have felt that previous disciplinary measures against the group did not go far enough and that with China's support, their continued existence poses a new threat both to his person and his policies.

IN either case, relations between Peking and Moscow have reached a new crisis-point. Mr. Kruschev seems to feel that the rivalry between the pro-Stalinists and the anti-Stalinists must be resolved soon and permanently if he is to remain the dominant personality in the Communist world and if his own views are to prevail over those of Mao Tse-tung's.

He also realises there are pressures building up against him which could become the instrument of his downfall. His agricultural policies have been a frequent source of criticism. Moreover, the diehard militants who remain in Russia and who rule China and Albania are unrepentantly opposed to his so-called "soft" line in East-West relations.

Perhaps Mr. Kruschev's recent stoking of the Berlin fires together with his multi-megaton bomb tests in the Arctic have mollified his critics somewhat, but the Soviet Premier has thrown down the gauntlet defiantly in his complete and now final repudiation of Stalin.

WITH the near-unanimous backing of the Congress he is in a strong position to continue his fight. He has issued a veiled warning to China that any nation attempting to go it alone "would deprive itself of the opportunities afforded by the world socialist system. In view of China's continuing food problems and her dependence on Soviet aid, the threat could hardly have been put more bluntly. Whether Mao Tse-tung will put principles and ideology before the well-being of 650 million people remains to be seen.

Hattie destroys capital of British Honduras 60 DIE IN HURRICANE HORROR

the streets of Belize*

Belize, Nov. 1.
Government authorities reported that at least 60, possibly more, persons perished in the blasts of wind and water from Hurricane Hattie. Some of the dead are still lying in the streets of Belize.

The casualties include 25 in Belize, the capital of this central American British colony, and 23 in Stann Creek to the south of the city. Reports of deaths at Caye Caulker range up to 40.

The "eye" of Hurricane Hattie, attended by wind gusts up to 200 miles per hour and 10-foot high tidal waves that rolled into Belize, passed through Stann Creek about 7:30 on Tuesday morning.

Homeless

There are only three or four houses left standing in Stann Creek. In Belize, 70 to 80 per cent of the buildings are damaged.

Authorities here estimated there are 10,000 to 15,000 persons left homeless by the hurricane's destruction.

While British forces rushed emergency supplies to Belize, the violent storm crossed Guatemala and threatened Mexico's west coast.

Earlier, Governor Colin Thornley, in a radio broadcast, appealed for troops and rescue boats.

Shortly after 1 pm the Governor radioed to the British Commander-in-Chief at Jamaica: "Request as many troops as are available be sent immediately. Company strength. These troops must be self-supporting. Have you any amphibious craft for inland water navigation?"

Flew over

From Chetumal, Mexico, a newspaper correspondent reported that the hurricane left Belize, "in the middle of a lake created by the sea."

After a flight over the city he filed this report to the Mexico City newspaper Diario de la Tarde:

"I have just made a flight over Belize in a Mexican Air Force plane. Thirty-five minutes after leaving Chetumal, we flew over the Belize airport but we were not able to land."

"Belize is now in the middle of a lake created by the sea. Outside the city, all the trees are torn up by the roots and scattered about in the mud."

"Many houses have lost their roofs. A good number of homes, mostly built of wood, are completely destroyed. In many cases, houses torn by the hurricane can be seen tumbled on top of another. Although Belize has some stone buildings, most are wooden."

Radio out

"The hurricane brought the sea into Belize's streets, toppled roofs, and toppled the radio tower, cutting off all outside communication."

"The rain continued to beat down on all the latitudes," the correspondent reported.

Meanwhile, three American Naval vessels have landed doctors, medical supplies, and other emergency relief in the British Honduras. Atlantic Fleet Headquarters announced to-

"They said the vessels — two destroyers and a fleet cruiser — had anchored at English Cay Light, 12 miles down channel from Belize, the capital. They put doctors and supplies ashore in small boats."

Naval headquarters said the ships had not tried to navigate up channel to Belize because Hurricane Hattie had blown away buoys and other navigational aids.

A U.S. aircraft carrier was also leaving for Belize this afternoon from Florida, carrying helicopters and emergency stores. First relief supplies to reach Belize were flown in today by a Pan American plane, placed at the disposal of the Governor. UPI & Reuter.

MP wants troops in Hongkong reduced

A Labour MP today urged the British Government to reduce the number of British troops in Hongkong.

Britain should use seaborne and airborne troops for this and other Far East areas, he said.

The Minister of Defence, Mr. Harold Watkinson, made no comment on this suggestion.

The MP was Mr. George Brown, Labour's deputy leader, who suggested in the debate on the Queen's speech that Britain should review her overseas defence commitments.

Some must be cut and the method of covering others altered, he told the House of Commons in a debate on the government's new legislative programme.

He said that British forces were not properly deployed or effectively armed or equipped and that in the present political circumstances, the European theatre must take first place.

He added: "But the corollary is that unless we are to abdicate our world-wide influence entirely and give up our contribution to the continuing spread of communism outside Europe, we must develop a new strategic policy based on flexible mobile forces, more independent of the fixed constellations on which we rely today."

Mr. Christopher Mayhew, Labour MP, said he had been on a tour of the Far East bases, and was able to discuss Hongkong with the high command there.

He recommended that Britain must help them to do this.

This must relieve to a very great extent the strain on service manpower, particularly the Army.

He added: "But the corollary is that unless we are to abdicate our world-wide influence entirely and give up our contribution to the continuing spread of communism outside Europe, we must develop a new strategic policy based on flexible mobile forces, more independent of the fixed constellations on which we rely today."

New York stocks close irregular

New York, Nov. 1.

Stocks closed mixed today, with blue chips weakening in the final hour while a list of scattered issues moved ahead.

Johns-Manville, Union Carbide, General Foods and Woolworth showed dollar-sized losses to drag down the Dow-Jones industrial average, despite strength in Du Pont and Proctor and Gamble.

Standard and Poor's 500 stock index managed to make a gain, with trading running slowly below yesterday's pace.

Litton climbed nearly half-a-dozen in the electronics where Fairchild, Camera, lead more than three and Zenith close to four. Hershey and Polaroid were up more than 10 points each in the final minutes. Black and Decker, Singer, Ingemar-Rund, Farm Corp., American Distilling and Standard Brands were ahead two or more.

Armeo jumped more than a point in a narrow steel section. Motors charted a similar pattern although Chrysler gained about three on news of better sales and hours of peaceful labour settlement.

Newcomers for Presidium and Secretariat K STRENGTHENS HIS HOLD

Anti-Stalinists put in vital party posts

A top Western assessment indicated today that Soviet Premier Krushchev has considerably strengthened his hold on the Kremlin leadership, with noted anti-Stalinists promoted to key party posts.

At least six prominent anti-Stalinists have been put in vital jobs, in the powerful Presidium and the Party Secretariat.

Moreover, a new star has moved into position close to the top, rivalling Mr Frol Kozlov, the heir apparent to Mr Krushchev.

He is 50-year-old Mr Gennadi Voronov, the agricultural "hero" who produced bumper harvests in the Orenburg region and drew public applause from Mr Krushchev.

Mr Voronov, who became a candidate member of the Presidium only last January, now appears to rank no. 3 in the hierarchy, after Mr Krushchev and Mr Kozlov.

There is speculation that he may even overtake Mr Kozlov in the order of succession. But this far it has been made clear that Mr Kozlov still ranks immediately after Mr Krushchev in the secretariat, by listing him immediately after his chief.

Carefully picked

The Central Committee of the Party has had about half its membership renewed. The newcomers appear to have been carefully picked. Many are known personal supporters or protégés of Mr Krushchev, and in many cases his personal choice.

Ranking military chiefs and propagandists have been elected to the central committee. They, too, are known backers of Mr Krushchev.

Doubtful members as well as "failures" have been removed from the policy-making bodies of the party.

A noted ouster from the Presidium and the Party Secretariat is 44-year-old Mr Dabek Nurdin Mukhiddinov, the only Moslem and representative from Central Asia to have reached the heights of the Presidium.

Closer control

Mr Mukhiddinov was responsible for Soviet manoeuvring in the Middle East in the crucial stages of Russian infiltration of the strategic area. Later he handled African policies including the Congo episode which ended with the ouster of the Soviets from Leopoldville. African developments have not gone to the liking of Mr Krushchev, either in Africa or in the United Nations.

tion for the removal from the Central Committee of the only woman member, Mrs. Ekaterina Furtseva. At the party Congress she was a whole-hearted supporter of Mr. Krushchev's anti-party campaign.

The Presidium has been reduced in number from 14 to 11. This is held a calculated move of the part of Mr. Krushchev to

Naval captain was hero of air disaster

Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 1. A Portuguese naval captain was the hero of an air disaster at Recife, northern Brazil, today when giant DC7 four-engined plane hit a hillside and burst into flames, killing 32 of the 69 people aboard.

Captain Henrique Alfonso da Silva Horta, flying to take up a new command, pulled several passengers from the burning plane. Then, he himself, collapsed with a deep head wound, and was rushed to hospital.

W. BERLIN POLICE CHECK ALL FOREIGNERS AT BORDER

Berlin, Nov. 1. West Berlin police today began checking the identity of all foreigners coming from East Berlin at the Friedrichstrasse crossing-point, with the exception of Russians in uniform and the occupants of Soviet Army cars. An American official said the Western Allied commandants had agreed to a West Berlin City government request to check vehicles from East Germany with diplomatic and consular license plates, which were formerly exempt from controls by plain-clothed city officials.

The official added that "there has been evidence that the privilege of CD and CC plates has been abused in East Berlin" and that it had been difficult to distinguish one East German car from another.

The Russians had not given the numbers of their official cars as requested, and the Soviet Embassy and diplomatic and consular corps in East Berlin all used normal East Berlin police license plates.

The new controls, matching those applied by the East Berlin police, included Soviet officials out of uniform, members of the Soviet Embassy and all Communist diplomats and missions in East Berlin.—Reuter.

Dead man's car crash kills two

New York, Nov. 1. Doctors listed three persons, two of them children, in critical condition today in the aftermath of a dead man's car crash through a halloween parade in Anoka, Minnesota.

Two elderly women were killed and a total of 23 persons were injured late yesterday when a runaway car, its driver stricken by a fatal heart attack, plowed into the column of little "spooks" and "goblins" in this self-styled "halloween capital of the world."

Victims were mowed down "like a bunch of tenpins" and costumed children were thrown through the air when the car hit.—UPI.

Chinese leave for home

Plans for Red summit cancelled

Moscow, Nov. 1. Plans for a Communist Party summit meeting have been cancelled because the Communist Chinese delegation has left for home, it was disclosed today.

RECEPTION

The Party Congress ended yesterday, and today 79 of the 80 foreign delegations were attending a final reception at the Kremlin before going their separate ways.

The exception were the Chinese, who were the first to leave. Mr Chou En-lai, Chinese Prime Minister, left Moscow more than a week ago after Soviet leaders ignored his plea for a quiet settlement of differences over Albania.

The rest of the Chinese delegation, headed by the Mayor of Peking, Mr Ping Chen, left for home by air today.

(The Chinese delegates arrived in Peking by air this morning, the New China News Agency reported).—Reuter.

FREIGHTER GROUNDED

Nanaimo, B.C., Nov. 1. The 7,247-ton Panamanian-registered freighter Belparell was driven aground at Nanose Bay, nine miles north of here, today when she was hit by a 60-mile-an-hour northwesterly gale while at anchor.

The Japanese-owned ship, commanded by Captain T. Hwang and carrying a crew of 40, dragged her anchor 800 yards in Nanose Bay, missed a breakwater and was driven hard aground on a sandbar.

Pumps

She began taking water and pumps were brought into action.

The extent of the damage to the vessel was not immediately known.

The Belparell had been loading at Nanose Bay. She had a third of her cargo aboard when the storm struck.—UPI.

Adventurous sailors set out for PI

Taipei, Nov. 1. Two adventurous sailors, whose 30-foot yacht Eurusduna was damaged by a typhoon after sailing from Hongkong last July, set out from Formosa yesterday hoping for a trans-Pacific voyage.

The pair, Alfredo P. Cazalis, of Spain, and Manuel Carvajal, of Guatemala, said they wished to stop first in the Philippines.

"After that, we shall try to hit such exotic places as Samoa, Fiji and Tahiti. There is no hurry," they told news men.

They left Hongkong last July in the four-ton Eurusduna only to be caught in a typhoon. The storm broke the boat's main mast and after drifting for a week, Formosa fishing boat towed them to the north Formosa port of Tamsui.—UPI.

To treat Japanese as white

Cape Town, Nov. 1. The Group Area Board which demarcates separate living areas for different races has ruled that Japanese are to be regarded officially as whites.

"Japanese will be able to live, use any hotel, restaurant, cinema or beach and go where they please," the Board ruled.

"In any case, they are exempt from the provisions as they are bona fide visitors to this country," the Board said.

The ruling was made since scores of Japanese are expected to visit South Africa as members of trade missions and because Japan is to establish an embassy in Pretoria next year.—UPI.

PARSON WILL QUIT
TO SAVE LIVESMR BOURNE
Unknown callers

THE Rev. Wilfrid Bourne has decided to give up his post as a Methodist minister so that he can spend more time saving lives over the telephone.

He has had thousands of anonymous phone calls from people in trouble since he talked a woman out of suicide seven years ago.

"I should have stayed on for some years," said Mr Bourne at his home in Murray-road, Solihull.

"But although my wife and I will have less to live on, I want to leave when I still have the energy to set up a full-time telephone ministry."

He will retire next year when he is 65.

Pension

Mr Bourne will exchange his £12-a-week salary and a rent-free furnished manse for his old age pension and a church pension of between £4 and £5 a week.

For the past four years he has been a minister on the Chichester-Bognor Regis circuit.

LONGER HOURS, ETC

Britain changes
drinking law

London, Nov. 1. Britain's drinkers raised their glasses today to longer drinking hours and more places to drink in.

A new drinking law that came into force at 8.30 a.m. yesterday now lets off like a drinker in Britain these new privileges.

They can buy bottled goods at a liquor store before 9 p.m.

or during the midafternoon hours when they are closed. Liquor stores in the past had to admit pub hours usually from around 10.30 a.m. to 3 p.m. and 5 p.m. to 10.30 p.m.

Restaurants and hotels that don't have liquor licenses can now serve drinks with meals if they supply at least one main meal a day.

'Drinking up' time

Guests in licensed hotels or boarding houses now can take friends back for a drink after pub closing time. But there's a small catch — the guests must pay for the drinks.

Patrons in pubs and inns are allowed a 10-minute "drinking up" time after the bar has closed.

In London's West End, clubs and restaurants with special licenses to serve drinks until 2 a.m. can now keep it flowing until 3 a.m. — Sunday mornings, too.

All over the country drinks at Saturday night dances can be served until the early hours of Sunday — except at Easter.

And liqueur-laced chocolates can be sold in any corner candy store.

The new law also is calculated to infuse more gaiety into pub life.

The pubs can now play records or even divert the customers with as many as two entertainers without having to buy a special music and dancing license.

And billiards will join darts as a permissible Sunday diversion while the bartender is filling them up again. — AP.

Wants body to look into complaints

London, Nov. 1. The first private Member's motion notified for Parliament's new session calls for a kind of public defender on Scandinavian ombudsman lines to watch complaints of private citizens when they come into conflict with the authorities.

Presented by Dr. Donald Johnson, Conservative MP, and supported by six other of his party's members, the motion urged the Government to appoint immediately a parliamentary commissioner on the lines of the Scandinavian ombudsman with powers to investigate and report publicly upon complaints by individuals against administrative and executive authority. — China Mail Special.

Opera singer
in performance

New York, Nov. 1. Soprano Leontyne Price, who lost her voice in the midst of a performance at the Metropolitan Opera night, was reported resting comfortably today.

Her difficulty was attributed to an acute virus infection.

A spokesman for Miss Price said a doctor would examine her later today to ascertain whether she will be able to sing in "Madame Butterfly" at the Opera on Friday night.

Her voice failure occurred during a performance of Puccini's "La Fanciulla Del West." — AP.

THE LONELY IKE CALLS A CABINET MEETING

from HELEN MASON

EVERY morning at six o'clock an active man—recently was his 71st birthday—wakes up on a farm in Gettysburg. He has enough energy to run the United States. But for the first time in 20 years, Dwight David Eisenhower has only his own life to run.

A 44-year-old man has taken over his job of managing a farm. Nine capable men smoothly operate his 100-acre farm. He has nothing more urgent to work on than his personal mail.

Retirement is the most difficult task ever taken on by the third President of America. And Ike is trying to do with it by pretending that it doesn't exist. Inevitably, however, he was soon forced to keep him from sleeping, he gets up at his usual hour, and eats a hearty breakfast. Then he drives to his office, where he answers 2,000 letters a week and keeps busy a staff of six.

Old friends

The man agreed to weighing invitation to a Summit conference is now besieged by society matrons wanting him to speak at meetings. Rather wistfully, he still writes to national leaders like Mr Macmillan and President de Gaulle, but now he writes as an old friend.

Mr Macmillan is one of the many political leaders who have visited Eisenhower in his retirement. When they arrive, he gladly takes time off to take them in a motorised golf cart on a guided tour of his farm.

A model of this farm sits on Ike's desk in the White House ever since he and Mamie decided in 1952 to settle there. The real thing is almost equally remote as this leaves the practical handling of it to his manager and staff.

He has a herd of 30 Aberdeen Angus cattle—five of which may be exhibited soon at shows—seven horses and two foals. The horses are for his grandchildren. Ike himself no longer rides.

On sunny days, when there are no visitors to distract him, Ike feels the tug of the golf course. And four afternoons out give the temples a whine. But, just as he can no longer issue instantly obeyed commands that will bring helicopters, planes, and private cars to his disposal, he can no longer summon golf partners when he feels like it.

During office life had a list of constant golfing companions who dropped everything to fetch their clubs when he felt like a gang. At the end of his term of office, he wrote to the wives of these men, apologising for demands his golfing had made on their husbands and thanking them for being so understanding. These same men might well be equally keen to partner him now, but Gettysburg is rather more difficult to reach at a moment's notice.

His favorite partner these days is his 13-year-old grandson, David, but David has a will as strong as Ike's, and if he has planned a game of baseball or tennis he says so quite firmly. A rather lonely figure, with no one now to criticise his time spent on the course, the former President frequently golfs alone.

Boredom

William Howard Taft, another of the few men turned loose after steering the United States, said sadly that an ex-President was like a giant locomotive pulling a toy wagon. Ike is finding out what he meant.

To close friends he and Mamie have confided that they are bored. Influential contacts are said to be seeking a role for him that would throw him back into partisan politics.

The man whose address is still listed in Who's Who as 1600, Pennsylvania Avenue, could not even dial a car or dial a telephone when he left the White House for the last time. He has had plenty of space in his schedule to learn both skills.

down directorships said to be worth £30,000 a year.

This he can well afford to do financially. Ike, who announced in 1948 that he was still very much a voter-catcher and Governor Rockefeller of New York recently spent a great deal of time successfully persuading him to pose for pictures with his choice of man in the approaching New York mayoral election.

Formality

Equally anxious to cash in on his career are directors of big businesses, but Ike refuses to lend his name to commercial concerns. He has turned one invitation—to a stag party, and it was not a success. People found it difficult to come to such a famous guest. Stripped of his power, Eisenhower still has to battle with the formality of fame. To men who worked beside him during his presidency, he has begged "Call me Ike," but they can't do it.

His evenings are spent quietly at home with his wife, reading historical novels, and watching, and sometimes ambling over to watch Mamie's favourite television show.

Time is an impossible occupation for a man who has spent his life borrowing it.

TALKING TO ONE OF THE GREATEST ALL-ROUND ARTISTS OF THE AGE

World-weary Cocteau buys

rose-coloured telescope from Chinatown

ON one side of the fireplace a mural of a broadshouldered man enclosing a bookcase in his flank. On the other side a mural of a woman pregnant with books. On the mantelpiece a large plate with three ceramic eyes and two mouths.

I was in the villa not far from Monte Carlo decorated and occupied for part of the year by Jean Cocteau, distinguished Frenchman of most of the arts.

He said in a voice that kept warm and caressing and at other times sharp and critical. "I try to talk in English, but I do not know much, but it is good exercise for me."

"However, if people are sympathetic, language is not important. The meaning is clear."

"Once I am smiling across the China Sea in a liner. A knock comes to my door. It is Charlie Chaplin."

Hearts

"He speaks no French. I speak no English at all."

"Pauline Godeau is with him. She speaks French and ballotic, garrulous, fast."

She is asked to interpret, but she says it is not necessary.

"She is right. We understand each other perfectly. Chaplin and me, he talks or we communicate all day and all night. We use our hands, our arms, our feet, our eyes, our hearts. Everything, it is perfect, n'est-ce pas?"

Underlining the point with an emphatic movement of his black mocassined foot, he leaped up. Princess Margaret and her mother.

But on a young man, Cocteau must have looked like a Gallic version of that energetic photographer who has become Earl of Snowden.

Pouring a small whisky, he said: "It is like with the Chaplins when I meet your Princess Margaret and her mother."

"They are so sympathetic although they speak very good French."

"I am invited to a dinner at the Ambassador's in Paris. The Princess wants to meet me. It is not far. It gives the impression that like some of the figures in his drawings he has three hands and several arms."

So fast it is to be seen that like some of the figures in his drawings he has three hands and several arms.

But on a young man, Cocteau must have looked like a Gallic version of that energetic photographer who has become Earl of Snowden.

"Later they print a correction and fortunately the Queen Mother and the Princess understand."

"It is to show they do, I think, that they invited me to the wedding. The only Frenchman invited. It is a great honour. For that I wear the top hat."

BARBARA GRIGGS REPORTING:

fashion Queen on a clothes spree

THE SHAH OF PERSIA may have given away the largest private fortune ever—but there are no signs yet that Queen Farah is taking to off-the-peg clothes as an economy measure.

For her recent visit to Paris she arrived with a whole wardrobe of clothes from the current Dior collection (unlike poor Jackie Kennedy who was obliged to be patriotically American-dressed for HER State Visit to Paris).

By request

By Farah's personal request, ten of the leading Paris couturiers put on a Command Performance fashion show for her. And during her private stay in Paris, when the Shah was over, she slipped off to Dior and placed another big order.

Her Dior wardrobe was a splendid one; she arrived in their swingy pink trapeze-line coat, collared in black mink with a toque to match.

For the special dress show she wore a white wool suit, with a swingy skirt and a black mink collar (same toque again), and ripped off the jacket halfway through the show to reveal a daintily long-sleeved top in black silk.

Copied

For a morning reception at the Elysee she wore one of the most widely copied numbers in the Collection—a bright three-piece of swirling skirted shirt (she wore it nice and short), fitted jacket and shortsleeved top buttoned over to one side, with an octolet toque.

Visiting the Citroen works, she wore a dress and jacket in grey crepe, collared in mink. And her evening appearances were made splendid by two of the most ravishing dresses imaginable (Mare Bohan's particular forte): a pink organza dress with a bodice encrusted with embroidery, and another all-over embroidery which didn't appear in the Collection but bore the imprint of Dior all over it.

Her evening coat? The most splendid in Paris; a floor-length cape of white mink.

Those sweater-and-skirt days on the Left Bank must have seemed a very, very long time ago to her.

NEW WAYS WITH COFFEE

Ice coffee for cocktail time

WHEN the sun is going down, about an hour or so before dinner—that's the perfect time to take a cold drink and some light hors d'oeuvres to the patio. It's the best way there is to end a long, warm day and begin a long, cool evening. Indeed, the cool reality should equal the warm anticipation.

One of the most refreshing pre-dinner drinks is iced coffee espresso—a bracing, zesty and refreshing pick-up that needs only a long twist of lemon peel for colour.

When it's served over cracked ice in a footed glass, it's as romantic and sophisticated as its winter-time counterpart. Moreover, iced espresso will be particularly welcomed by those who don't take cocktails, but enjoy the pre-dinner festivities.

The hors d'oeuvres that go with iced espresso should be light and cool and just as interesting as the beverage. A new,

NEALE FRASER GETTING BACK INTO FORM

Melbourne, Nov. 1. Former Wimbledon champion Neale Fraser today put himself back in contention for a berth on the Australian Davis Cup team with an impressive performance in his most severe test since undergoing a leg operation.

Fraser, though obviously not yet in top form, ran and jumped for shots with perfect freedom in a strenuous exhibition doubles match.

Before the exhibition, Fraser went through a strong singles workout with professional star Frank Sedgman and then did exercise in a gymnasium.

"I intend to play as much tennis as possible to get into top form for the Davis Cup," the 1960 Wimbledon champion said.

Fraser is scheduled to team with Davis Cupper Roy Emerson in doubles in the Queensland Championships next week. However, he won't attempt to play singles before the New South Wales Championships the following week.—UPI.

Nottingham, Nov. 1. Nottingham County, who are in the relegation zone of the English Third Division Football League, today dismissed their manager, Frank Hill, a former Arsenal player.

In the past 12 months, 24 managers have severed connections with their clubs, which means that more than a quarter of the 92 English League clubs have had a change in management in that period.—China Mail Special.

European Cup win for Spurs

Rotterdam, Nov. 1. Tottenham Hotspur, the English club, beat Feyenoord, of Rotterdam, 3-1 in the first leg of their first round proper European Cup football match here tonight.

Tottenham led 1-0 at half-time.

Tottenham owed their success to their superior experience and fitness against the part-time Dutch professionals who, though tiring towards the end, never gave up trying.

Early on, Feyenoord made several strong attacks but poor shooting and a sound display by Brown in goal prevented them from scoring.

Half-time left Terry Dyson put Tottenham ahead after 42 minutes and centre-forward Frank Saul scored for the London side in the 48th and 72nd minutes.

Feyenoord's goal came from right-half Reinaldo Kreymer, who netted in the 61st minute with a strong shot from 30 yards out.—Reuter.

Campbell: Lake Eyre a hopeful proposition

Adelaide, Nov. 1. British speed ace Donald Campbell said in Adelaide today that Lake Eyre looked a very hopeful proposition for a world record land speed attempt.

"We are at present working on what it will cost to remove the salt islands from the strip but the cost is the least of our worries," he said.

Donald later flew to Melbourne for a conference of heads of companies associated with the Lake Eyre project.

He praised the enthusiasm of South Australian people for the proposed speed attempt and said this was a big point in its favour.—China Mail Special.

SHOULD FOOTBALLERS KISS EACH OTHER?

Yes, say the girls: No, say the men

Stockholm. Should big, strong, manly footballers kiss each other publicly in front of the crowded stands during a match is a problem now being discussed in Swedish newspapers.

Week after week during the soccer season Sweden's Monday newspapers have been filled with pictures of goal scorers in weekend matches being kissed and embraced by their fellow players.

Sports writers maintain that the habit of expressing their joy and emotions in this way was quite foreign to Swedish footballers and other sportsmen—correct behaviour and dignity are regarded as Swedes' national virtues.

Becoming a 'must' It is only comparatively recently that these enthusiastic kissing scenes have become common on Swedish football grounds. But in recent weeks, particularly at the more exciting league games, congratulatory kisses appear to have become "must" for the star goal scorers.

In Sweden football is played in the summer months and the ends in the autumn to give place with the advent of snow and icy weather, to winter sports.

Although you will not find Swedish policemen arresting loving couples for kissing in the streets such behaviour is still formally regarded as "disorderly conduct."

"It is not much more shocking to see two big strong men kissing and hugging each other in front of a crowd of 10,000 football fans, one Stockholm newspaper asked.

Out of five readers, chosen at random by the newspaper and asked for their views, two men objected to watching footballers kissing, while the three women asked said it looked odd to them but they somewhat grudgingly gave their approval.

A typical female comment was: "We northerners react because we are not used to such habits. But I think the boys may be allowed their hugs and kisses if in this way they can find expression for their joy."

But a male reader said: "They should not do it. Instinctively one reacts against seeing two fellows kissing each other. It is available here in Sweden and, although one knows that it is quite natural for Russian players to kiss each other on the cheek, it goes against the grain."

Analysing the rights and wrongs of the matter, one sports writer said: "It all depended whether such scenes on the football grounds were expressions of genuine feelings or whether they were false demonstrations."

"Nobody should be ashamed of showing their feelings but the question should be, is that kiss genuine or fake?" There can no doubt, he says, that the captain of the Hammarby club felt real joy when he recently kissed his fellow player who scored the goal which meant that their club retained its place in the first division of the All-Sweden football League...

Other sports "But naturally every goal in every match cannot arouse the same feelings of joy and relief," the writer continued.

"However it has now become a custom to kiss and hug each other after every single goal scored. It has become a convention here now and when it is no longer a real feeling, he said.

It has been pointed out that in some sports, cycling and speedway, for example, it is the local girl to kiss the winner when presenting the traditional laurel garland. This too is mere ly a convention, but it looks better in Swedish eyes when it is a girl and boy.

Apart from such conventional kissing as that of the politician who kisses the child who presents him with flowers, in Sweden the kiss is regarded as reserved for the expression of love between a man and a woman. But in the 18th century the kiss of friendship or of greeting on the cheek or on the mouth was natural, with between persons of the opposite, and of the same, sex. Since around 1800, however, more puritanical ideas have gained ground here and it was customary to hear that a man should never cry, nor embrace, hug or kiss another man.

Training headquarters for McNeely will be set up in Toronto, but a site has not yet been selected. The challenger is due here in a couple of weeks.—AP.

Soccer news from other lands

By ARCHIE QUICK

Crisis or no crisis, Soccer continues to be played in the Congo, and at Leopoldville there was an exciting "local Derby" between the Nomads and the Dragons.

Photographers were not allowed to sit near the goalposts because witchcraft was suspected and feared! They had to take their shots from the midfield touchline. Three Congolese players are now playing in Belgium for Saint Trond FC, states FA News.

The fight against relegation in the Egyptian Championship was so close among five teams up to the final day that bribery was rife and six prominent internationals were suspended sine die. This has involved the reconstruction of the national eleven. One of the team in the bribery scandal admitted their guilt but failed to save themselves from relegation.

When England play Austria at Wembley on April 4 they will probably face Ernst Gekwir, captain of Austria in 1955 and also skipper of the FIFA team that year. The last of the continental attacking centres-left, he has just returned to Austria-Vienna FC after playing in Italy for Sampdoria for five years.

Santos FC, of Brazil, the club for whom the legendary Pele plays, will take part in 135 matches during the year 1961.

Alfredo di Stefano has signed a new two years contract with Real-Madrid FC, and the sum he received is stated to be £20,000. Real-Madrid wish to sign the great Pele from Brazil and are prepared to top any other offer made, and may even match the São Paulo for nothing. The fee they received when they met Chile's Colo Colo was 37,000 American dollars.

ON THE BALL with Stan Cullis

Yes, Matthews is right to play on

IT'S NOT TIME YET TO CALL IT A DAY

Should Stanley Matthews have retired while he was still in the top-flight of League football? Or is he right to accept the new challenge of Second Division soccer at the age of 46, long after most players have left the game?

I suppose no player has had to answer so many questions about his possible retirement as the legendary figure who now reappears in the red and white shirt of Stoke City, the club where he started his wonderful career over three decades ago.

To all these questions about his future, Stan's answer has invariably been that he was enjoying his football too much to contemplate retirement. And that, I would say, is the most practical answer he could give.

Key to success

When a player ceases to enjoy his football and it is reasonable to assume that his age is largely responsible, then he should hang up his boots and call it a day. The fact that he is not enjoying his game will inevitably result in his performance on the field being below the expected standard.

In this respect there are probably quite a few players—a great deal younger than Matthews—who should think about retiring on this score.

But Stan's enjoyment of the game has never waned. Enthusiasm, he has said, is the key him to get out of the most awkward situations imaginable. I recall seeing him in an international against Holland when he was seemingly trapped with the ball right against the corner flag. After side-stepping one defender, he went on to beat another man who was backing up only two or three yards away. It was a fantastic display.

Never let up

Another great asset which he has had—abundant—was usually applied more to boxers—is the "killer instinct."

As soon as he had the measure of a full-back, he would mercilessly take advantage of his superiority and never ease up against the defender.

He did so on many occasions when full-back, had told him to "get rid of the ball" with the implication of grim consequences if he did not.

But this intimidation technique had no effect at all on Matthews. He knew he had the beaten and would ruthlessly exploit the smallest weakness in the defence.

(All rights reserved)

Two more reasons

But when Matthews feels his play is falling below a reasonable standard, I am quite sure that he will know it is time to retire. It will not be necessary for other people to tell him.

Stan says he believes he can carry on for two more seasons at least. No one can know his capabilities better than himself.

He is, of course, amazingly fit, and his position on the field is one which a player can often occupy longer than most others.

And when he does finally retire?

It is difficult to imagine that energetic Stan will not remain active in some sport. But of one thing I feel certain: he has no intention of becoming a football manager.

Charnley, blue-eyed and deeply tanned from a holiday in Majorca, shot me a sudden, craggy grin when I asked:

"Every afternoon when I've finished training, I go to a master hairdresser in the East End of London where I am taking a £150 six-months' which, on a night of ring massacre in Rome last July, smashed Sicilian Ray Noble to a crippling defeat in four rounds; the hands which now deal in perms as well as punches.

All he got then was £5 a week as an apprentice boilermaker.

He has seen, too, the down-fall of other boxers and he has no intention of going the same way."

"Do you let him do your hair?" I said.

"Oh, yes. It gives him confidence. He's already very good. He has lots of patience. He cuts it, sets it, combs it."

I looked at the hands which only last month savaged

Ho is No. 2

Was this the venomous fighter who has twice clashed with the champion, Joe "Old Bones" Brown, for the world title?

Was this the menacing amalgam of brawn and hitting power who, at eight years and 48 pounds, has only once been knocked down? The man who is currently ranked No. 2 light-heavyweight in the world?

And when he does finally retire?

Champion Charnley plans new career—as a hairdresser

The pearl-grey 2.4 Jaguar with the eye-catching, red leather upholstery slid to a stop outside the pleasant, semi-detached house in Thanet-road, Bexley, Kent. Out of it, clad in an impeccably cut, Italian-style suit, stepped the one-man company of David Fraser Charnley, Ltd., otherwise known as Dave Charnley, the cold, competent, and completely merciless champion who, at Nottingham last month, successfully defended his three light-weight titles—British, European and Empire—against Darkie Hughes, of Wales.

And what, I inquired politely of Britain's top prize-fighter—

with all respect to world champion Terry Downes and Johnny Caldwell—he had been doing on that tranquil autumn afternoon?

We were talking in a

Charnley lounge where, standing in silver splendour on a

"I've thought about it for years.

I want something to occupy my

His wife told me: "We did

Dave did have one for a while

Young Mrs Charnley went

'I did not intend to kill,' man says in court

A metal factory worker charged with murder denied at the Criminal Sessions this morning that he bought a knife with the intention of killing a fellow worker.

He is Kong Kuan, 27, charged with the murder of Yim Kai at the Yim Wah metal factory at Nau Tau Kok on June 29.

Kong said yesterday that Yim had talked about him and said he was trying to steal Yim's girl friend, the daughter of the factory proprietor.

On the afternoon of June 29, Kong said, he felt Yim had gone too far with his gossip and he told Yim he should concentrate more on his job.

Grabbed something

Yim grabbed him and put his hands round his throat.

"I thought I was going to be suffocated, so I grabbed something and thrust it at him once. I felt my life was in danger," he said.

To Mr Dennis Remedios, Crown Counsel, Kong said he did not intend to kill Yim. He only wanted to make him release his grip on his neck.

Mr Justice R. H. Mills-Owens and the jury of five men and two women are hearing addresses by the Crown and Mr H. Lu (for Kong).

The hearing will continue this afternoon.

3 SEAMEN JAILED FOR NOT OBEDIING MASTER'S ORDER

Three Chinese seamen were sentenced to two weeks' jail by Mr R. Woodward at the Marine Court this morning when they were found guilty of disobeying a lawful order of the ship's master.

They were Li Ting-yah, 31, sailor, Li Kuan-fung, 33, a store keeper and Chen Cheung-leung, 24, sailor.

All three were accused of disobeying a lawful command given by Captain G. G. Mackay, Master of the mv Marine Explorer, on September 25 while the ship was in Yawata, Japan.

32 REGIMENT, RA LEAVES AFTER DUTY TOUR HERE

The 32 Regiment, Royal Artillery, under the command of Lt-Col H. A. Hardy, sailed in the trooper Nevosa at noon today for England on holiday on completion of its three-year tour of duty here.

Lt-Gen Sir Roderick McLeod, Commander British Forces, was among high ranking officers saying farewell to the regiment which has been replaced by 34 Regiment, RA.

To mark the departure of the 74 (Battle Axe Company) Battery, 2/Lt David Robertson, a National Service Officer from Dunfermline, Fifeshire, and the tallest member of the Battery, carried the Battle Axe on to the Nevosa. The Axe was initially escorted by members of 13 (Martinique) Battery.
